

Florac: a spring in the town

Causses Gorges - Florac

Le Rochefort, Florac (© Olivier Prohin)

From lanes to little squares, this walk crosses the town of Florac to reach a beautiful grass amphitheatre near the spring of the river Pesquié (Pêcher).

This short walk explores the old parts of Florac, a small town built at the junction of four rivers (Vibron, Tarnon, Mimente, Tarn) and several historical traffic axes: a draille (drovers' road for taking livestock to summer mountain pastures) and Royal roads linking Languedoc and the Auvergne. Upstream from the town, the spring of the Pêcher mysteriously gushes out of a big mass of fallen rocks from the Causse Méjean.

Useful information

Practice : Discovery trails

Duration : 1 h

Length : 1.8 km

Trek ascent : 52 m

Difficulty : Very easy

Type : Loop

Themes : Architecture and village, Water and geology

Trek

Departure : On the little square "Paul Maury"

Arrival : Château

Markings : 🌀 découverte PNC

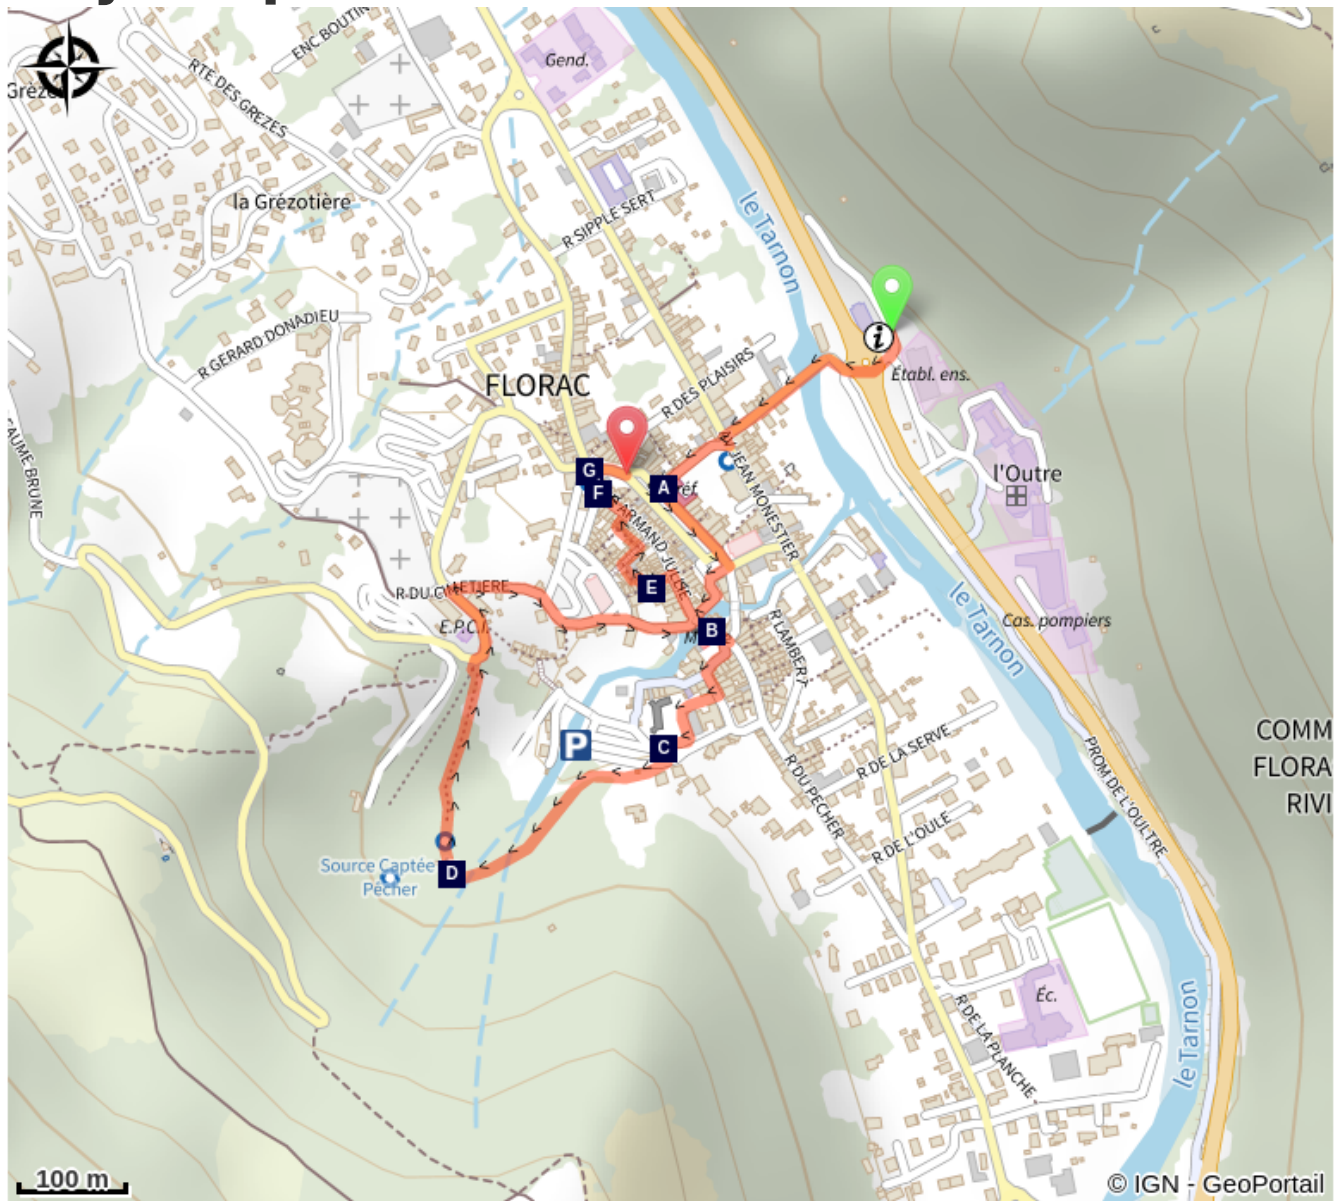

Cities : 1. Florac

Altimetric profile

Min elevation 540 m Max elevation 583 m

On your path...

-  The Esplanade (A)
-  The river Vibron (B)
-  The castle and fairground (C)
-  The Pesquié spring (D)
-  The former convent (E)
-  Grand-Rue (F)
-  The Planet neighbourhood (G)

All useful information

Advices

This walk has twelve numbered information panels (in French).

How to come ?

Transports

Florac
Bus lines 7 / 8 / 9 / 10

see Guide des transports en Lozère

Access

On the N 106 from Mende or Alès. In Florac, follow signs for “Parc national des Cévennes” to get to the Foirail car park.

Advised parking

Foirail car park, Place François Mitterrand

Information desks

Tourism'house and national Parc at Florac

Place de l'ancienne gare, N106, 48400
Florac-trois-rivières

info@cevennes-parcnational.fr

Tel : 04 66 45 01 14

<https://www.cevennes-gorges-du-tarn.com>

Source

Commune de Florac Trois Rivières

<http://www.ville-florac.fr>

Parc national des Cévennes

<http://www.cevennes-parcnational.fr/>

On your path...

The Esplanade (A)

The covered passage of the sub-prefecture is one of several in Florac, running beneath the houses. You have just gone through the former town wall and now find yourself inside the medieval town. Besides the beautiful ancient plane trees (the oldest are 200 years old), you can see, at one end, the statue of Léon Boyer, who built the Garabit viaduct with Gustave Eiffel and died in 1883 in Panama, where he was working on the construction of the Canal; and at the other end, the temple (Protestant church) and the War Memorial.

Attribution : PROHIN Olivier

The river Vibron (B)

This river has been used as the drinking-water supply for the town's many fountains, to irrigate its gardens, power up to eight water mills and provide water for a fish farm. In the old days, it was also used for public wash-houses, tanneries and as a drain for waste water.

Attribution : PROHIN Olivier

🏰 The castle and fairground (C)

Florac castle was rebuilt in 1652, after the religious wars, and now stands on the spot of the former feudal castle, mentioned in records dating back to the early 13th century. During the French Revolution, the castle was turned into a salt loft for storing salt. Sold to the French State in 1810, it was used as a prison. It still retains some features of that period. Since 1976, the castle has been the seat of the Cévennes National Park.

Attribution : © Guy Grégoire

🌍 The Pesquié spring (D)

The spring of the Pêcher surges in several places from a big mass of fallen rocks. It has not been possible so far to explore any of these points further. The spring provides a lot of water, but in irregular quantities:

- low flow rate: between 80 L/s and 200 L/s
 - average flow rate: between 1,250 L/s and 7,000 L/s
- The average temperature is 10 to 10.2°C.

Attribution : PROHIN Olivier

🏰 The former convent (E)

Originally built to house a hospital, this building became a Capuchin convent in the 17th century. Subsequently transformed back in to a hospital, it has since also been the seat of the sub-prefecture and a religious institution. It is known as the “house of the Congregation” and is today used as a private school. We have to picture it in the late 17th century, when this district was densely populated, teemed with life and saw much economic activity: textile craftsmen, leather craftsmen, mule drivers, carters and innkeepers, who made their living from the merchants and goods passing through.

Attribution : PROHIN Olivier

🏠 Grand-Rue (F)

Rue Armand Jullié used to be Florac's trading street and would have been lined with workshops with typical shop fronts. Mule drivers once used this road to carry their goods from the Auvergne down to the Midi, before they were replaced by cart drivers and finally wagoners. More than twenty wagoners would stop off in Florac at the turn of the 20th century. They would rest here and, before resuming their journey, would take on additional horses to help climb the steep hills that awaited them on the road ahead.

Attribution : PROHIN Olivier

🏠 The Planet neighbourhood (G)

In the 16th and 17th centuries, a large number of religious conflicts between Catholics and Protestants affected the Cévennes, bringing with them much destruction. After the Peace of Alais was signed by Richelieu and the Duke of Rohan in June 1629, Protestants retained the right to practise their religion, but their fortifications were razed. This included Florac's town walls. The house bearing this information panel is one of the town's oldest: its tower used to watch over Thérond Gate. It also stands at the crossroads of the former road linking Nîmes with Saint-Flour and the former road from Florac to Séverac via the Causse plateau.

Attribution : PROHIN Olivier